Washington, D. C., Sept. 30.-Secretary Endicon's order against women and children, published here, has made ven more talk than the Vilas secret circuiar, telling members of Congress how they could secure the removal of Republican postmasters in spate of the President's civil service proclamation. Endicott has passed here for an aristocratic gentleman who held himself above practical Democratic politics, and who prided himself mainly upon the declaration, which the family lost no opportunity to announce, that none of their race had ever engaged in trade. Therefore, great was the astonishment when race had ever engaged in trade. Therefore, great was the astonishment when it was found that before he had been in the Cabinet ten months he had directed the removal of half the woman and children in the arsenals of the country where they were classed as Republicans. There is a general feeling of shame among army officers to-day in consequence of the publication of this circular. Gen. Benet himself, when he found it was to be printed, felt called upon in justice to his own reputation, to explain that the circular had been issued at the instance of Secretary Endicott.

It was the original intention to have an out-of-doors meeting, but the inclement weather made this impossible; in fact the day was so disagreeable, made so by strong stinging winds, cold rains and some snow, that it was not supposed that there would be any speaking, but on Mr. Hart's arrival from Wheeling it was arranged to have him speak in the school house, as there were several farmers in town who very much desired to hear him.

Gov. Wilson followed with a speech of an hour and a half. It was the usual evasive and demagogic effort of the Free Trader, and a weak presentation of the issues from a Democratic standpoint, delivered with Gov. Wilson's usual actiom and misrepresentations. Gen. Prince Bismarck is known to suspect the English Court as the source of the publication, hence the language of his statement is directed against that court.

The chancellor's outspoken declarations have not tended to ward allaying party strife over the diary. They have party strife over the diary. They have rather excited public passion to fever heat. Nothing else is talked about in heat. Nothing else is talked about in places of resort and furious quarrels are a frequent result. The press in its discussion of the affair reflects vigorously the party strife. The semi-oficial papers do not hesitate to assail the memory of Frederick, villifying both his character and intellect.

hasty examination of the body, said they thought it must have taken about five minutes to complete the work of the murderer, who then had plenty of time to escape the patrol. Mitre square, the scene of the second murder, is a thoroughfare. Many people pass through the square every Sanday morning on their way to prepare for market in the notorious Petticoat lane. The publicity of the place adds to the darkness of the crime.

The police who have been severely criticised in connection with the White Chapel murdees, are paralyzed by the latest crimes. As soon as the news was received at police headquarters a messenger was despatched for Sir Charles Warren, chief commissioner of police, who at once visited the scene of the murders. The inhibitants of White Chapel are dismayed. The vigilance committees, which were formed after the first crimes were committed, had relaxed their efforts to capture the murderer. At several meetings held in White Chapel tonight it was resolved to resume the work of patrolling the streets in the district in which the murders have occurred.
